

Adapting DCIO Strategy for the Fiduciary Rule

How DCIO managers can navigate the Dept. of Labor's fiduciary rule and strengthen relationships with plan advisors.

October 2016

Ignites Research reports are sold on an individual or annual subscription basis.
For pricing information, please contact
Ben Northover at (212) 542-1272
or at BenN@ignites.com.

Table of Contents

Executive Summary	3
Methodology.	4
Key Takeaways From the Report.	5
Chapter 1: Opportunities in the Fiduciary Rule	7
Priorities of Plan Advisors.	9
Chapter 2: Helping Plan Advisors Evolve Their Business	12
Chapter 3: Potential Implications for DC Investments	17
Expense Ratios and Share Classes	21
Chapter 4: Adjusting DCIO Sales Strategy	25
Where Value Add Can Help	27
Main Recommendations for Action From the Report	31

Table of Illustrations

Figure 1: Key Points of Fiduciary Rule for DCIO Managers' Consideration	8
Figure 2: Plan Advisors' Top Strategic Priorities in Wake of Fiduciary Rule.	10
Figure 3: FT 401 Advisors' Plans to Serve Micro DC Plan Clients Post Fiduciary Rule	12
Figure 4: Elite Plan Advisors' Sources of Compensation	13
Figure 5: FT 401 Advisors' Plans to Use the Best Interest Contract Exemption (BICE)	14
Figure 6: Advisors' Views on Demand Growth for Outsourced Fiduciary Services	15
Figure 7: Actions Advisors Are Taking Before Fiduciary Rule Takes Effect	17
Figure 8: Investment Product Winners Post Fiduciary Rule	18
Figure 9: Investment Product Losers Post Fiduciary Rule.	20
Figure 10: How DCIO Firms View Expense Ratios Post Fiduciary Rule	22
Figure 11: Investment Vehicles and Share Classes to Benefit Post DOL Fiduciary Rule	23
Figure 12: DCIO Firms' Top Channel Priorities in Wake of Fiduciary Rule	25
Figure 13: Top Factors Showing Advisors Acted in DC Plan Client's Best Interests	26
Figure 14: Value-Add Topics That Would Most Benefit Plan Advisors Post Fiduciary Rule.	28

Executive Summary

In April 2016, the Department of Labor released its long-awaited Conflict of Interest Rule, commonly known as the fiduciary rule. By mandating that advice to retirement accounts adhere to the fiduciary standard, the rule is already driving significant changes to the DCIO market even though full compliance isn't necessary until the start of 2018. For DCIO managers, most of these changes will revolve around the new needs of DC plan advisors and what they must do to ensure compliance with the Dept. of Labor rule.

As DC plan advisors adapt to these changes, this will have implications for DCIO managers' sales strategy and the products they recommend. This report addresses the main ways DCIO managers will need to reassess and adjust their business practices. The disruptive nature of the fiduciary rule will cause more work and a fair share of nuisances. Yet from this disruption come opportunities for DCIO firms to succeed in the new post-fiduciary rule era — an era that is already upon us.

This report explains how the fiduciary rule will really affect the business of specialist plan advisors, the most important audience for DCIO teams. The good news is that these advisors view the pursuit of growth as their top priority in the wake of the new regulation; managing costs that stem from the rule is the second priority. We explain how DCIO firms can help these advisors play a mix of offense and defense.

We also delve into how the new rule will shape plan advisors' investment decisions. The need to avoid potential conflicts of interest and the heightened attention to cost are going to affect product categories such as equity funds and target risk funds, but active management is far from dead. It's also clear that DCIO firms expect informal limits on expense ratios to develop, with 73% of DCIO executives having strong views on the most they'll be able to charge for actively managed equity funds under the fiduciary rule.

The impact of the fiduciary rule will be sending ripples through the DC market well beyond 2018. To help DCIO managers think through how to navigate the era of the fiduciary rule, this report addresses three main questions:

1. What help will plan advisors need to make the most of the fiduciary rule?
2. Which investment products and vehicles/share classes are really going to get a boost from the fiduciary rule and which are realistically going to lose ground?
3. Where can DCIO firms adjust their strategies to focus on the most urgent opportunities and provide the most valuable support?

— Matthew Van Wagenen, Rita Raagas De Ramos and Loren Fox, report co-authors

Methodology

This report is based on proprietary surveys of two main audiences conducted by Ignites Retirement Research:

1. We solicited the opinions of the Financial Times 401 Top Plan Advisors, a select group of DC plan advisors from across the U.S. with an average of $770 million in DC plan assets under advisement. Advisors applied for inclusion in the list, which was published in the Financial Times. Ignites Retirement Research ranked the 401 plan advisors, and our research partner, Broadridge Financial Solutions, provided unique data from its proprietary databases to help identify advisors who specialize in serving DC plans. These are true specialists: the average advisor on the list has 71% of his or her total practice's assets under management concentrated in DC plans. For this report, we surveyed 281 of the FT 401 advisors in June–August of 2016.
2. For the perspective of DCIO asset management sales executives, we drew on a June–August 2016 survey of leaders of DCIO teams. The survey covered 23 DCIO firms managing a total of roughly $1.01 trillion in retail DCIO assets as of Dec. 31, 2015; in terms of retail DCIO assets, eight of the firms had under $10 billion, eight of the firms had between $10 billion and $40 billion, and seven of the firms had $40 billion or more.

Ignites Retirement Research is dedicated to helping DCIO teams optimize their exposure and use in employer-sponsored retirement plans.

Using proprietary surveys, interviews, and analysis of third-party data, our specialized reports provide a 360-degree view of a key topic in the industry, yielding valuable insight and actionable recommendations.

Core topics of coverage include:

- DCIO sales strategy
- DCIO marketing
- DC plan advisors
- Investment products
- Distribution channels
- Investor preferences

Clients include:

- Broadridge Financial Solutions
- Fidelity Investments
- Goldman Sachs
- Janus Capital
- John Hancock Investments
- Lincoln Financial Group
- OppenheimerFunds
- T. Rowe Price
- Wells Fargo

For information on subscriptions or single-report purchase, please contact Ben Northover at BenN@ignites.com or 212.542.1291

Personnel

Loren Fox is Director of Research at Ignites Research. He had been a senior research analyst at Strategic Insight. Prior to that Loren was a journalist, working at Institutional Investor and elsewhere. He earned his BA from Johns Hopkins University and MS from Columbia University. Contact Loren at lfox@money-media.com

Rita Raagas De Ramos is US Research Manager at Ignites Research, where she is part of the Distribution and Retirement services. She was previously the Managing Editor of Ignites Asia, and before that worked at Dow Jones Newswires, UPI, and elsewhere. She earned a BS from the University of the Philippines. Contact Rita at rderamos@money-media.com

Matthew Van Wagenen is a Research Analyst at Ignites Research, where he helps probe retail distribution and DCIO issues. He was previously a senior analyst at Corporate Insight, researching the US brokerage industry; he has also worked in public relations. Matt earned his BS from Seton Hall University. Contact Matthew at mvanwagenen@money-media.com

Michael Ferraro is the Operations Manager at Ignites Research, where he oversees the major processes and systems. Previously, he was the Manager of Direct marketing for MandateWire, Pensions Expert, DPN and Ignites Research. Michael currently holds a BS from York College of Pennsylvania and an MBA from Dowling College. Contact Mike at mferraro@money-media.com